Verb form Not to be confused with the Gerundive. A gerund (/'dʒɛrənd, -ʌnd/[1] abbreviated GER) is any of various nonfinite verb forms in various languages; most often, but not exclusively, one that functions as a noun. In English, it has the properties of both verb and noun, such as being modifiable by an adverb and being able to take a direct object
The term "-ing form" is often used in English to refer to the gerund specifically. Traditional grammar makes a distinction within -ing forms between present participles and gerunds, a distinction that is not observed in such modern grammars as A Comprehensive Grammar of the English Language and The Cambridge Grammar of the English Language. Traditional use This section does not cite any sources. Please help improve this section by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. (July 2016) (Learn how and when to remove this template message) The Latin gerund, in a restricted set of syntactic contexts, denotes the sense of the verb in isolation after certain prepositions, and in certain uses of the genitive, dative, and ablative cases. It is very rarely combined with the adjectival gerundive is preferred. By contrast, the term gerund has been used in the grammatical description of other languages to label verbal nouns used in a wide range of syntactic contexts and with a full range of clause elements. Thus, English grammar uses gerund to mean an -ing form used in non-finite clauses such as playing on computers. This is not a normal use for a Latin gerund. Moreover, the clause may function within a sentence as subject or object, which is impossible for a Latin gerund. Playing on computers is fun. since the infinitive is available.[2] Traditional English grammar distinguishes non-finite clauses used as above from adverbial use, adjective-like modification of nouns, and use in finite progressive (continuous) forms Playing on computers are my nephews. They are always playing on computers. In these uses playing is traditionally labelled a participle. Traditional grammar also distinguishes -ing forms with exclusively noun properties as in I work in that building contrast "gerund" I like building things That is a good painting contrast "gerund" I like painting pictures Her writing is good contrast "gerund" I like writing novels The objection to the term gerund in English grammar is that -ing forms are frequently used in ways that do not conform to the clear-cut three-way distinction made by traditional grammar into gerund, and Latin conjugation § Gerund Form The Latin gerund is a form a gerund A gerund may function syntactically in the same way as a finite verb may be followed by a direct object e.g. ad discernendum vocis verbi figures of speech', hominem investigating the man'. However, this was a rare construction.

Writers generally preferred the gerundive construction e.g. res evertendae reipublicae 'matters concerning the overthrown'). When people first wrote grammars of languages such as English, and based them on works of Latin grammar, they adopted the term gerund to label non-finite verb forms with these two properties. Gerunds in various languages Meanings of the term gerund as used in relation to various languages are listed below. Latin has the non-finite gerundium, formed with in -andum, -endum and noun inflexions. It is the syntactic equivalent to a noun, except in the nominative and accusative cases, which use the infinitive. In particular the ablative case forms (-ando, -endo) were used adverbially. Latin grammars written in English use the form gerund.[6] See the section above for further detail. Several Romance languages have inherited the form, but without case inflections. They use it primarily in an adverbial function, comparably to the Latin ablative use. The same form may be used in an adjectival function and to express progressive aspect meaning. These languages do not use the term present participle. Grammars of these languages written in English may use the form + -ando or -endo Spanish gerundio: stem form + -ando or -iendo Portuguese gerúndio: stem form + -ando or -iendo Portuguese gerúndio: stem form + -ando or -endo Spanish gerundio: stem form + -ando or -iendo Portuguese gerúndio: stem form + -ando or -iendo Portuguese gerúndio: stem form + -ando or -endo Spanish gerundio: stem form + -ando or -iendo Portuguese gerúndio: stem form + indo Romanian gerunziu: stem form + -ând(u) or -ind(u) Catalan and French have inherited not the gerund form but the Latin present participle form in -nt. Catalan gerundi: stem form + -ant or -ent French stem form + -ant or -ent French grammar maintains a distinction between: participle présent when the form is used adjectivally, and may be inflected form gender and number. gérondif when the form is used adverbially, without inflection, generally after the preposition en. In Modern French, the gérondif cannot be used to express progressive meaning. Grammars of French written in English may use the forms gerundive and present participle. In the earliest stages of the West Germanic languages, the infinitive was inflected after a preposition. These dative and, more rarely, genitive case forms are sometimes called gerundium or gerund or West German zi beranne dative of beran Old Saxon berannia dative of beran Old Frisian beranne The modern continental successor languages German and Dutch have preserved a few vestiges of these forms, which are sometimes termed gerundium. Frisian preserves the original distinction, e.g. West Frisian freegje ("ask") - te freegjen English has no vestige of the West Germanic gerund. Traditional grammar uses the term gerund for the -ing form of a verb when it is used as a noun (for example, the verb reading in the sentence "I enjoy reading.").[9] See the sections below for further detail. In Dutch, it translates either the term "gerundium" or the description "zelfstandig gebruikte, verbogen onbepaalde wijs van het werkwoord". The infinitive form of the verb is used as gerund, e.g. Zwemmen is gezond. Since Afrikaans has by and large lost explicit morphological marking of the infinitive form of the verb, verb stems are used as gerunds, e.g. Swem is gesond. In Arabic, it refers to the verb's action noun, known as the masdar form (Arabic; المصدر). This form ends in a tanwin and is generally the equivalent of the -ing ending in English. In Persian, it refers to the verb's action noun, known as the ism-masdar form (Persian: اسم مصدر). In Hebrew, it refers either to the verb's action noun, formed by appending a suffix. Common suffixes are -ás (adás, giving), -és (kérés, asking). In Japanese, it designates verb and verbals adjective forms in dictionary form paired with the referral particle no, which turns the word "('thing') modified by the adjective form of the verb. In Bulgarian, it translates the term деепричастие (deepritfastije). It refers to the verb noun formed by adding the suffix -йки (-jki) to the verb form, like in jage (jade, he eats) — jagejku (jadejki, while eating). In Turkish, it refers to a large number of verb endings subject to vowel harmony and sometimes used in conjunction with postpositions. Called zarf-fiil, bağ-fiil, ulaç or gerundium[10] and defined as "a verb used as an adverb in a sentence", the Turkish gerund may also constitute part of an (adverbial) clause. In Polish, it refers to the verbal noun, formed by appending a suffix. Common suffixes are -anie (pływanie, swimming), -enie (jedzenie, eating). In Russian, it refers to the verbal noun, formed by appending a suffix. Common suffixes are -anie (pływanie, swimming), -enie (jedzenie, eating). In Russian, it refers to the verbal noun, formed by appending a suffix. suffixes -я (-ja) Present; -в (-v) or -вши (-vši) Past.[11][12][13][14][15][16] In other languages, it may refer to almost any non-finite verb form; however, it most often refers to an action noun, by analogy with its use as applied to Latin. Gerunds in English In traditional grammars of English, the term gerund labels an important use of the form of the verb ending in -ing (for details of its formation and spelling, see English verbs). Other important uses are termed gerund when it behaves as a verb within a clause (so that it may be modified by an adverb or have an object); but the resulting clause as a whole (sometimes consisting of only one word, the gerund itself) functions as a noun within the larger sentence. For example, consider the sentence "Eating this cake is then used as a noun, which in this case serves as the subject of the larger sentence. An item such as eating this cake in the foregoing example is an example of a non-finite verb phrase; however, because phrases of this type do not require a subject, it is also a complete clause. (Traditionally, such an item would be referred to as a phrase, but in modern linguistics it has become common to call it a clause.) A gerund clause such as this is one of the types of non-finite clause. The structure may be represented as follows: Subject Verb Object STRUCTURE OF NON-FINITE CLAUSE eating this cake Formation Non-finite verb forms ending in -ing, whether termed gerund or participle may be marked like finite forms as Continuous or Non-continuous, Perfect or Non-perfect, Active or Passive. Thus, traditional grammars have represented the gerund as having four forms – two for the active voice and two for the passive. Thus, traditional grammars have represented the gerund as having loved Perfect Having loved Having been loved The same forms are available when the term participle is used. Examples of use The following sentences illustrate some uses of gerund clause serves as a noun within the larger sentence. In some cases, the clause consists of just the gerund (although in many such cases the word could equally be analyzed as a pure verbal noun). Swimming is fun. (gerund as subject of the sentence) I like swimming in the pool is one way to relax. (gerund phrase as subject) Do you fancy swimming in the pool, (gerund phrase as direct object) After swimming in the pool, he ate his lunch. (gerund phrase as subject) Do you fancy swimming in the pool? (gerund phrase as direct object) After swimming in the pool, he ate his lunch. phrase as the complement of a preposition) Using gerunds of the appropriate auxiliary verbs, one can form gerund clauses that express perfect aspect and passive voice: Being deceived can make someone feel angry. (passive) Having read the book once before makes me more prepared. (perfect) He is ashamed of having been gambling all night.
(perfect progressive aspect) For more detail on when it is appropriate to use a gerund, see Verb patterns classified as gerund use below, and also §§ Uses of English verb forms and Gerund. Distinction from other uses of the -ing form In traditional grammars, gerunds are distinguished from other uses of a verb's -ing form: the present participle (which is a non-finite verb form like the gerund, but is adjectival or adverbial in function), and the pure verbal noun or deverbal noun. The distinction between gerund and present participles is not recognised in modern reference grammars, since many uses are ambiguous.[18][19] Roles of "gerund" clauses in a sentence Non finite -ing clauses may have the following roles in a sentence:[20] Role Example A Subject Eating cakes. E Prepositional object I dreamt of eating cakes. F Adverbial He walks the streets eating cakes. G Part of noun phrase It's a picture of a man eating cakes. In traditional grammars, the term gerund is not used for roles F, G, and H. Thus 1. John suggested asking Bill. Subject Verb Object STRUCTURE OF SENTENCE John suggested asking Bill Role D object — traditionally asking is a "gerund" (no subject Verb Object STRUCTURE OF NON-FINITE CLAUSE asking Bill 2. I heard John asking Bill 3. I heard J CLAUSE John asking Bill 3. Playing football is enjoyable Subject Verb Complement STRUCTURE OF SENTENCE Playing football is enjoyable Role A subject Verb Complement STRUCTURE OF NON-FINITE CLAUSE playing football 4. Her playing of the Bach fugues was inspiring. Subject Verb Complement STRUCTURE OF SENTENCE Her playing of the Bachfugues was inspiring Possessive Head Postmodifier STRUCTURE OF NOUN PHRASE Her playing of the Bach fugues Noun phrase, not clause — playing is a verbal noun (also termed deverbal noun) For more details and examples, see -ing: uses. "Gerund" clauses with a specified subject In traditional grammars, a grammatical subject has been defined in such a way that it occurs only in finite clauses, where it is liable to "agree" with the "number" of the finite verb form. Nevertheless, non-finite clauses imply a "doer" of the verb, even if that doer is indefinite "someone or something". For example, We enjoy singing. (ambiguous: somebody sings, possibly ourselves) Licking the cream was a special treat (somebody licked the prize is a great honour (someone is or may be awarded the prize) Often the "doer" is clearly signalled We enjoyed singing yesterday (we ourselves sang) The cat responded by licking the cream (the cat licked the cream) His heart is set on being awarded the prize (he hopes he himself will be awarded the prize) Meg likes eating apricots (Meg herself eats apricots) However, the "doer" may not be indefinite or already expressed in the sentence. Rather it must be overtly specified, typically in a position immediately before the non-finite verb We enjoyed them singing. The cat licking the cream was not generally appreciated. We were delighted at Paul being awarded the prize. The "doer" expression is not the grammarians may object to the term subject for these "doers". And prescriptive grammarians go further, objecting to the use of forms more appropriate to the subjects (or objects) of finite clauses. The argument is that this results in two noun expressions with no grammatical connection. They prefer to express the "doer" by a possessive form, such as used with ordinary nouns: We enjoyed their singing. (cf their voices, their attempt to sing) The cat's licking the cream was not generally appreciated. (cf the cat's purr, the cat's escape) We were delighted at Paul's nomination, Paul's nomination, types of text.[21] Prescriptivists do not object when the non-finite clause modifies a noun phrase I saw the cat as exclusively the object of I saw The modifying phrase licking the cream is therefore described as a participle use. Henry Fowler claims that the use of a non-possessive noun to precede a gerund arose as a result of confusion with the above usage with a participle, and should thus be called fused participle [22] or geriple. [23] It has been argued that if the prescriptive rule is followed, the difference between the two forms may be used to make a slight distinction in meaning: The teacher's shouting startled the student. (shouting is a gerund, the shouting startled the student by shouting) I don't like Jim's drinking wine. (I don't like Jim's drinking wine. (I don't like Jim's drinking wine. (I don't like Jim's drinking) I don't like Jim's drinking wine.
Jim when he is drinking wine) However, Quirk et al. show that the range of senses of -ing forms with possessive and non-possessive subjects is far more diverse and nuanced:[24] Sentence Meaning The painting of Brown is as skilful as that of Gainsborough. a. 'Brown's mode of painting'b. 'Brown's action of painting' Brown's deft painting of his daughter is a delight to watch. 'It is a delight to watch while Brown deftly paints his daughter.' Brown's deft action of painting his daughter is a delight to watch while Brown deftly paints.' I dislike Brown's painting his daughter. a. "I dislike the fact that Brown paints his his daughter is a delight to watch. a. 'It is a delight to watch brown's deft action of painting his daughter.' These sentence exemplify a spectrum of senses from more noun-like. At the extremes of the spectrum they place at the noun end (where possessive Brown's unmistakably expresses ownership): Noun phrase Meaning some paintings of Brown's a. 'some paintings depicted his daughter and painted by him' b. 'some paintings depicted his daughter and paintings of Brown's paintings of his daughter and paintings of his daughter and paintings of brown's a. 'some paintings of his daughter and his daughter a 'while he was painting his daughter' The man painting his daughter that day, I decided to go for a walk. 'since Brown was painting his daughter' The man painting his daughter, Brown painting his daughter, Brown painting his daughter that day, I decided to go for a walk. 'since Brown was painting his daughter' The man painting his daughter that day, I decided to go for a walk. the participle use as an adverbial. in [5a] and [5b] the verbs kept and coming refer to the same event. Coming is related to the progressive aspect use in She is coming. Verbs such as start and stop, although similar to verbs like keep,[25] are generally classified with verbs like remember. Therefore, She started coming is termed a gerund use. The proposed test of passivisation to distinguish gerund use after remember from participle use after keep fails with sentences like [5b]. The proposed test of possible possessive subject successfully distinguishes [4b] (traditional gerund) from [5b] (traditionally participle). The variant * We kept Jane's coming is not grammatically acceptable. The variant I remember Jane's coming is acceptable — indeed required by prescriptive grammarians Verbs followed by "gerund" pattern Historically, the -ing suffix was attached to a limited number of verbs to form abstract nouns, which were used as the object of verbs such as like. The use was extended in various ways: the suffix became attachable to all verbs the nouns acquired verb-like characteristics; the range of verbs allowed to introduce the form spread by analogy first to other semantic groups of verbs associated with abstract noun objects; finally the use spread from verbs taking one-word objects to other semantically related groups verbs. [26]

The present-day result of these developments is that the verbs followed by -ing forms tend to fall into semantic classes. The following groups have been derived from analysis of the most common verbs in the COBUILD data bank: [27] Pattern 4a: I remember seeing her come 'LIKE' AND 'DISLIKE' GROUP adore, appreciate, (cannot) bear, (not)

analyses her coming as a string of two objects of We kept:- (1)her and (2)coming. 'SEE' GROUP catch, feel, find, hear, notice, observe, photograph (usually passive), see, show, watch 'BRING' GROUP bring, have, keep, leave, send, set Pattern 6a: She ended up coming These verbs refer to starting, spending or ending time.
The following -ing form is an adverbial, traditionally classed as a participle rather than a gerund. die, end up, finish up, hang around, start off, wind up Pattern 6b: She wasted time coming These verbs also relate to time (and, by extension, money). The object generally expresses this concept. However, the object of busy or occupy must be a reflexive pronoun e.g. She busied herself coming. The following -ing form is an adverbial, generally classed as a participle rather than a gerund. begin, busy, end, finish, kill, occupy, pass, spend, start, take, waste Verbs followed by either "gerund" or to-infinitive pattern Like the -ing suffix, the to-infinitive spread historically from a narrow original use, a prepositional phrase referring to future time. Like the -ing form it spread to all English verbs and to form non-finite clauses. Like the -ing form, it spread by analogy to use with words of similar meaning. A number of verbs now belong in more than one class in their choice of 'complementation'. Verbs followed by either "gerund" or bare infinitive patterns are sometimes used to express different meanings I saw him leaving — 'I saw him as he was leaving' I saw him leave —
'I saw him as he left' Borrowings of English -ing forms in other languages English verb forms ending in -ing are sometimes borrowed into other languages. In some cases, they become pseudo-anglicisms, taking on new meanings or uses not found in English. For instance, camping means "campsite" in many languages, while parking often means a car park. Both these words are treated as nouns, with none of the features of the gerund in English. For more details and examples, see -ing words in other languages.
